

Session Title	Reflections on Sustainable Development Goals to co-creating the Post-2030 Agenda
Session Description	Sustainable development is the eternal theme of mankind. However, as 2030 approaches, the progress of the United Nations SDGs is not ideal overall. Based on this, researchers need to start considering what kind of development agenda the world needs after 2030 from a multidisciplinary and multi-perspectives to continue to guide human development. This topic intends to discuss and summarize the experiences and lessons learned in the current SDGs framework and put forward suggestions on the post-2030 agenda. The participants can start on the problems identified during the research on specific SDGs and reflect on how to revise the goal/target/indicator, such as modifying the existing indicators, extending the implementation time, and adding new indicators. This topic will adopt a combination of targeted invitations and public solicitation to those researchers familiar with different goals.
